

NABPAC Elects 2021 Board of Directors and Officers

February 1, 2021, Washington, DC—The National Association of Business Political Action Committees (NABPAC) has elected a new board of directors. Tracy Winn, PAC manager at Anthem, Inc. will lead the group. She takes over for outgoing president Tim Foltyn, director, political programs at Walmart.

“I am grateful to Tim for his service and look forward to continuing to work with Tracy. As a long time NABPAC board member and executive committee officer, Tracy is the perfect person to lead us into a new election cycle,” said NABPAC Executive Director Micaela Isler. “She is respected and measured and is a thoughtful leader who will work tirelessly to defend and promote the importance of employee engagement in the political process through employee-funded and trade association PACs.”

Rounding out the executive committee are Meaghan Killion Joyce (International Paper) as first vice-president; second vice president, Courtney Schoenborn (New York Life); secretary, Bridget Sewell (American Property Casualty Insurance Association); treasurer, Kipp Maloney (National Federation of Independent Business); and at large member, John Mason (Altria).

“We must be prepared for the future, no matter what comes our way. In 2021, we will strengthen NABPAC’s foundation for grassroots advocacy, solidify our solid financial footing and preserve robust operations. I also am committed to ensuring our members have all the tools they need to build lasting relationships on Capitol Hill and with partners who are committed to ensuring American employees have their voices heard in the political process,” said NABPAC President Tracy Winn.

Winn will focus on streamlining board governance, enhancing business development, furthering the organization’s advocacy and public affairs capabilities, and continuing to build on the quality programming and member benefits, as a result of the global pandemic last year.
